LAFD Air Operations Tour

On December 18, 2024, a small group of Wings Over Wendy's members toured the LAFD Air Operations Facility at the Van Nuys Airport. Dave Steinbracher arranged the tour, which pilot Rick Ruff conducted.

The facility is located off Armenta, on the west side of the runways, not far from the Valley Relics Museum.

Rick led us on a tour of the Air Operations facility and one of the Department's five Leonardo AW-139 medium-duty helicopters. He described the helicopters' various missions, which include brush fire suppression, air ambulance transport, high-rise fire response, and hoist rescues, and how the helicopters and crews can be configured to perform those missions.

The LAFD also uses two Bell 206 light helicopters for training and HLCO (Observation) duties. All LAFD pilots are sworn members of the Department and initially trained and worked in the field as firefighters. After completing at least four years in the field as a firefighter and obtaining the necessary FAA pilot license on their own time, a member may apply for a position as an LAFD helicopter pilot. Once accepted into the program, members receive initial City flight training from the LAPD, which maintains a robust helicopter program of its own, followed by at least two years of LAFD Air Operations training. In total, the LAFD pilot training pipeline takes approximately four years to complete.

Arnold's journey through the hierarchy was marked by challenges, including a feeble air service, underfunded by an isolationist government, and numerous accidents involving Army Air Corps aircraft. Despite these setbacks, Arnold's vision for a new kind of warfare, using air power to strike directly against enemy centers of manufacture and

December 9, 2024

The December 9, 2024, meeting started with Bill Dillon talking about how proud he is of being awarded the 2024 Veteran of the Year by the LA City Council. He also reminisced on his meeting and having his picture taken with Admiral Nimitz in a Honolulu hotel during WWII.

The featured presentation on December 9, 2024, was a documentary titled Admiral Chester Nimitz WWII Naval Mastermind.

Admiral Chester Nimitz, a professional naval officer, was appointed to lead the Pacific fleet after the surprise attack by Japan on Pearl Harbor. Despite not having a remarkable record, Nimitz was chosen for his ability to lead and inspire his men. He was born in Fredericksburg, Texas, and his family had a deep love for the sea. Nimitz graduated from the Naval Academy and served in various capacities, including as a specialist on Diesel engines for the Navy. He rejected a lucrative offer from a civilian firm to stay with the Navy and eventually became the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation. Nimitz was known for his humane gestures, such as retaining Joseph Rochefort in charge of code-breaking at Pearl Harbor and Edward Layton, Chief Intelligence Officer of the Pacific fleet. He was a calm and steady leader who prioritized the welfare of his men and the success of his mission.

Admiral Chester Nimitz, the US Pacific Fleet commander, faced numerous challenges in the early stages of World War II. Despite limited resources, he devised a strategy to counter the Japanese threat, dividing the fleet into four task forces built around the available American carriers. Nimitz's decision to focus on the Central Pacific rather than the South Pacific, as suggested by Admiral King, proved to be a strategic triumph. The Japanese fleet was defeated at the Battle of Midway, and Nimitz's forces successfully bypassed island after island, driving the Japanese back. Despite the loss of the carrier Yorktown and many planes, the Japanese loss of four carriers was catastrophic and unrecoverable. Nimitz's leadership and strategic decisions played a crucial role in the US victory in the Pacific.

The Real Reason Why the United States Bought Alaska from Russia

The featured presentation on December 16, 2024, was a video titled The Real Reason Why the United States Bought Alaska from Russia.

The narrator discussed the history of the United State's purchase of Alaska from Russia. Due to the high price paid, it was initially considered a folly but later found to be a natural wonderland with abundant resources. The narrator also touched on Russia's colonization of Alaska, the impact of European diseases on indigenous populations, and the role of the Russian-American Company in the region. The discussion also covered the interactions between Russia and other European powers, particularly Spain, and the importance of trade in the region.

The narrator discussed the history of Alaska's acquisition by the United States. The speaker highlighted that the idea of the purchase being a folly is a strong historical myth in American history. The acquisition was initially met with enthusiasm by the American people but faced opposition in Congress due to financial concerns. The speaker also mentioned the discovery of gold in Alaska, which led to a significant increase in population. The conversation ended with a discussion about the current state of Alaska, including its role in the Cold War and its status as the 49th state of the United States.

Bill Ratner Presents Ed Reynolds with Joke Books

Also, on December 23rd, on behalf of Wings Over Wendy's, Bill Ratner and Boyd Davis selected a bag of Joke Books from Boyd's Next Chapter Books store as a gift to Ed Reynolds for him to select his weekly joke. They didn't provide him with the ability to deliver the jokes, but he will now have fresh material to select from.

Munich Massacre (1972)

The featured presentation on December 23, 2024, was a documentary titled Munich Massacre (1972).

The organizing committee of the 1972 Munich Olympics was trying to help erase the memory of the 1936 Olympics overseen by Adolf Hitler.

None of the security guards carried guns, and they all wore light blue suits, making this the "serene Olympics."

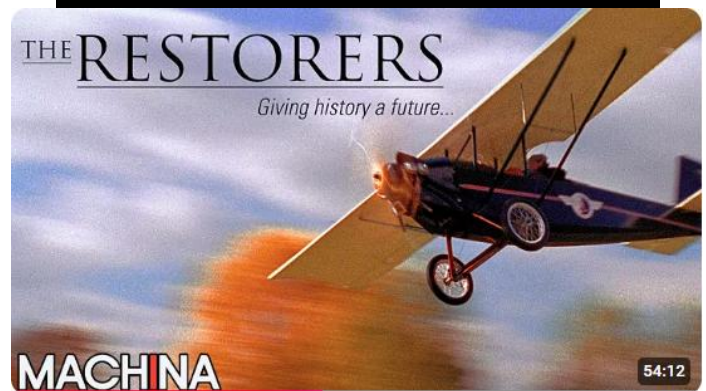

The beginning of the Games was spectacular, featuring such stars as Olga Korbut and Mark Spitz.

Then, in the early morning hours of September 5th, it all went horribly, horribly wrong.

The Palestinian terrorist group Black September breaks into the Olympic Village in Munich and takes nine Israeli athletes hostage, demanding the release of Palestinian prisoners in Israel. Police Chief Manfred Schreiber negotiates with leader Issa to avoid executions while determining there are five gunmen inside. Israel refuses to release any prisoners. After a tense standoff, Issa demands a plane to fly the hostages and gunmen to Cairo, which Schreiber agrees to in order to remove the crisis from the Olympic Village.

The narrator discussed the events surrounding the Munich Olympics hostage crisis in 1972. The terrorists, led by Issa, took nine Israeli athletes hostage and were eventually transported to a military airport in helicopters. The German authorities, led by Police Chief Schreiber, had a plan to eliminate the terrorists and rescue the hostages. However, the plan failed due to several critical mistakes, including the terrorists' ability to read the authorities' moves, the incorrect positioning of the helicopters, and the failure to clear the area of media and spectators. The narrator also highlighted the lack of proper training and equipment for the snipers involved in the operation. The tragic outcome of the operation was the death of all nine Israeli athletes and five terrorists, with three terrorists surviving and being arrested.

The Art of Aircraft Restoration

The featured presentation on December 30, 2024, was a documentary titled The Art of Aircraft Restoration.

The video interviewed several individuals and firms that specialize in aircraft restoration, dating back to the first Wright Brothers glider.

Nick Engler and his team are rebuilding and flying replicas of the Wright Brothers' aircraft to re-experience the birth of aviation. With the help of military pilots, they successfully flew a replica of the 1902 Wright Glider in the same location as the Wright Brothers.

Jerry Beck and Bob Odegaard in North Dakota restored and maintained rare World War II aircraft like the P-51 Mustang and F4U Corsair.

The air show circuit allows owners to display their restored warbirds in flight, educating the public on aviation history. The documentary follows the extensive efforts required to keep these historic aircraft flying for future generations.

Major leadership shakeup, new budget battles coming to VA in 2025

By Leo Shane III Dec 27, 2024

The year ahead will be a period of major changes for the Department of Veterans Affairs, with new leadership, new priorities, and likely its biggest budget in history. However, how much of that will impact veterans' benefits and health care is less clear.

The Department, which now boasts a $350 billion budget and more than 400,000 employees, will start 2025 with VA Secretary Denis McDonough and his administration wrapping up four years of expansion and outreach efforts.

President-elect Donald Trump's inauguration in January will mean at the least a clearing out of that Democratic leadership, replacing political appointees with his own picks. (Continued page 8)

VA issues were a major focal point of Trump's White House during his last administration. On the campaign trail last summer, he hinted at a repeat during his return to office, with plans to further expand medical care options for veterans and continue reforms in federal hiring (and firing) practices.

The following are some of the top Veterans Affairs stories to follow in 2025.

A new VA secretary

In November, Trump nominated former Georgia congressman Doug Collins as his pick to be the next Veterans Affairs secretary. The choice was a mild surprise among veterans advocates, given that Collins did not sit on the Veterans Affairs committee or champion many veterans bills during his eight years in Congress.

However, Collins, 58, has already been endorsed by several veterans groups and is not expected to face the same level of opposition as some of Trump's other cabinet picks.

Collins served in the active-duty Navy for two years as a chaplain and re-enlisted in the Air Force Reserve following the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. He deployed to Iraq in 2008 as a member of the 94th Airlift Wing and still serves in the reserves.

His confirmation hearing before the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, expected in January, will offer a preview of policy priorities for the upcoming administration. Shortly after his nomination, Collins released a statement promising to “streamline and cut regulations in the VA, root out corruption, and ensure every veteran receives the benefits they’ve earned.”

While he does not have any problematic veteran policy stances on his resume, Democratic lawmakers may question his efforts to help Trump overturn the results of the 2020 election and his public stances undermining the validity of those results.

However, Republicans in the Senate have already signaled strong support for Collins' nomination, and the chamber could approve him in time to take office just after the inauguration.

Department budget battles

One of the first issues Collins will have to deal with as VA secretary will be the Department's budget, both for the current fiscal year and fiscal 2026.

For several months, lawmakers and VA planners have sparred over department budget estimates, with members of Congress promising increased scrutiny before any new funds are approved.

In November, VA officials announced they expect to need at least $6.6 billion in extra funding for the current fiscal year to cover increased costs related to higher usage of VA medical facilities over the last year.

That number was revised down from a $12 billion estimate over the summer. Republican House lawmakers have bristled at the numbers, accusing planners of playing
